

Purpose of the Terminal Emulation

The terminal emulation enables you to test a complete application inclusive of its character output, without having to leave Natural Studio.

A screen output of an executed program will automatically cause the terminal emulation window to be opened and to be closed again when the program terminates (logically, the development server session reaches the NEXT level). The terminal emulation window cannot be closed manually using the Close button.

Utilities for which Natural Studio does not offer a graphical user interface are made available by the terminal emulation. Entering the corresponding system command in Natural Studio's command line will automatically open the terminal emulation window.
