

Online Technical and Site-Specific Information

Natural provides some technical information online relevant to the system administrator for system identification and debugging purposes, as well as a facility with which the system administrator can provide site-specific information.

The TECH command opens a window with information that includes the following information:

- Current versions of Natural, the Editor and;
- Values of the ASIZE and SSIZE parameters;
- Library, current date and time, terminal ID, TP and operating systems

The UINFO command displays site-specific information maintained by the system administrator. This information may consist of several screens. Navigation among Information screens is done by PF key, scroll commands or topic selection, as directed in the screens.
